Census positions are temporary.

Conducting a census requires us to fill a wide variety of positions. For 2004 Census Test operations, we need enumerators (census takers) for temporary jobs. These employees conduct interviews with community residents and update addresses. Most positions require a driver's license and use of a vehicle.

What do the jobs pay?

Census jobs pay competitive wages in your area. Also, census workers are reimbursed for authorized expenses, such as mileage.

Can I learn to use a computer?

For our largest data collection operation, field staff use hand-held computers. We'll pay for your training.

You can qualify if....

- You are a U.S. citizen.
- You are a noncitizen and no citizens are available, particularly in areas where bilingual ability is a necessary qualification.
- You have a valid Social Security number.
- You pass a written test of basic skills.
- You do not engage in any partisan political activity while doing census work.
- You pass a background check.

Note: Males born after December 31, 1959 must be registered with Selective Service.

What is the employment test like?

We need people who not only want to earn extra money, but are qualified to do the required work.

The employment test consists of 28 multiple-choice questions designed to measure the skills and abilities required to perform a variety of census jobs like:

- Reading
- Math
- Following instructions
- Map reading

You have 30 minutes to complete the test. If you do not pass the test, you may retake the test when it is offered in your area.

What will the work schedule be like?

For enumerators (census takers) and crew leaders jobs, work schedules are flexible. For office jobs, hours are less variable.

In the field, some census operations require you to work during daylight hours. For other operations, which require interviewing the public, you must be available to work when people are usually at home. This includes evenings and weekends.

Both full-time and part-time hours can vary between day and evening schedules.

Will I be hired?

Due to the nature of census work a large number of applicants apply and take the employment test; not everyone who is qualified is hired. We will call you when we can offer you a job. If we cannot reach you by telephone, we will call the next qualified applicant.
